e A DETAIL in connection with the management of the Cousular Service in China, which though at first sight of a minor character is not without some importance was noticed in Commissioners on the Civil Service which sat about two years ago, but it does not seem that anything has yet been done with regard to it: On the matter of the pay to Consular whether it would not be a great benefit to Consular Assistants in China if they were phatically in the affirmative, and it is to be regretted that up to the present nothing his been done to carry out the suggestion. The Imperial Customs Service is much in advance of the British Consular Service in this re--spect, as they have provided very good furnished quarters for their employes in Shanghai, being fully alive to the extent to which the status of the service would be raised by that step. It is to be regretted that the authorities at home cannot see this particular drift of the question so well as those who have been long resident in China, and it is not surprising on this account that Mr. HART should have stolen a march upon them in regard to it. In China it is difficult for juniors of limited means to find suitable places of abode. Here there are no Mrs. BARDELLS who let lodgings for single men and the Consular assistant, who is thrown upon his own resources, has either to live at what compared with his means is a some. what expensive rate at a notel, or has to make shift in a rough and ready and generally every incomfortable manner. Even those who have quarters provided for them are not very much better off, as the expense of buying good furniture is very great, and bad furniture, with which, as a rule, they have to be contented, will not soll again, except at a serious loss. Often enough a Consular official is appointed to a new port, sells off his old furniture at the one he is leaving at a loss, and has just got together what h wants at the new place when he is again removed and has to put up with a further loss. , At best Consular officials are not very well paid as compared with the ordinary rates of remuneration in such places as China. Of course there are counterbalancing advantages against the smaller pay they receive in the the hospital:cortainty of their positions so long as they conduct themselves reasonably, and in ultimate pension when they retire. But these a license and hawked conject and his residence took advantage of it. His Lordship then went played. advantages do not do away with the actual was on the first floor of a house in Gilman's on the consider the separate point as it affected The prisoner said it was very probable that day on the first floor of a house in Gilman's on the first careful and economical compared with other who was his nephew, bong the son of his herely solely on the statement of Mr. Jack, employed by Atan, the contractor, for a time at people, and that in places where so much is youngest brother. and fine furniture. The fact may be of little equanimity of the stronger minded; but all men are not characterized by strength of mind, and some may justifiably seel a touch of annoyance at the peculiarity of the position they have to take up in China as compared with what is accorded at home to gentlemen of education occupying tolerably responsible posts under Government. 'A vory great deal of this results simply from the absence of a house at which the Consular assistants might live in common. The average mind associates a man very closely with his place of residence and the bire fact that Consular assistants lived in some sufficiently imposing residence instead of as it were living nowhere, would do much to raise their general social position. So long as they are merely juniors this does not matter greatly in a practical point of view, but in the course of time they become Vice-Consuls and Consuls themselves, and the half Bohemian life which they have led during the for undertokings necessarily large, but in the the earlier days of their careor does not tend to facilitate their commanding the influence and respect which it is highly desirable they should have. If only from an asthetic point of view, we sadly needed a foil to Mr. Gladstone. behores us to be satisfied, with what we have secured even though the foil may be hard to get rid of again. We must not be unjust to the present Government. English Tories make excellent rulers, especially when the country is "in a mood to be raled. No one knows better bow to discern a need for himself than the English country gentleman; and a cabinet o country gentlemen will have no difficulty persuading us, for a time at least that it is the only bulwark between " peace and order" and something very terrible and ill-defined, which the follacious logic of Radicals is wont to describe under the name of progress an reform. Against such fallacions logio the Tory Cabinet has steadily set its face; and on Tuesday last it had an excellent opportunity of proving to the nation how well

A motion was made to affirm the principle that the masses of men berded together i great cities require on Sundays, for their elevation and recreation, something beyond and be--tween the obarch and the gin-shop; and that it consequently becomes incumbent on the State to provide something which shall satisfy the want. This is a principle on which we might to excused for supposing that there could not be two rational opinions. If we are not more utterly deceived and blinded than we have ever been in the course of our lives, that is principle which, candidly discussed upon it merits, would be affirmed by any and every body of Englishmen who could be got to think it worthy of serious discussion That the logical prependerance of the House of Commons is decisively in its favour, we cannot bring ourselves to doubt. That an overwhelm. ing majority voted against it on Puesday may be readily explained by the fact that we are no longer living by logic, butsby a rule of Chinese Government, by stop-gaps to Radical reform by theneglect of political principles and national opinions, and by a well-disciplined phalanx of China Fire Insurance Company's Shares—3129 country gentlemen. If the House did not think Mr. Laylor's motion worthy of serious disousmon, this was certainly not because of its lack of argumentative weight, but rather because serious discussion was not included in the bond by virtue of which the Pories are in power. It would be a huge mistake to suppose that the country returned Mr. Disraeli's supporters in order to wage serious discussions. Logic is altogether beside the mark in the deliberations of our English national assembly: A Parliament effete before it was born would only make itself ridiculous by attempting to argue on a question of national progress—still Indo-Chiness Sugar Company—894 per cont. following facts are andmitted for consideration. precending to vote on logical grounds. IMPERIAL QUARTO. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. ANGLO-CHINESE DICTIONARY, published at the Daily Pres Office, Hongkong.

NOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of Interears been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are bere given in extenso. Each and every word in fully illustrated and explained, forming evercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Funti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vant economy of apace, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the Chalmers Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Mcdburst's English / THIS UNDERSIGNED begs to inform the and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English HONGKONG, HO NAM, AND CANTON
